Paris Saint-Germain, PSG, have reportedly emerged as potential suitors for Atletico Madrid's Antoine Griezmann.

Griezmann is enjoying another productive season at Atletico, finding the back of the net on 20 occasions in 43 appearances in all competitions, in addition to contributing 10 assists.

The 28-year-old had reportedly been keen to join Barcelona this summer, but it seems unlikely that the Catalan outfit will make another move for the Frenchman, who turned them down ahead of the 2018 World Cup.

Atletico boss Diego Simeone has since played down claims that Griezmann could leave the Wanda Metropolitano.

According to reports in Spain, PSG are considering a move for the attacker, but he would only join the Ligue 1 giants if Neymar or Kylian Mbappe were to leave in this summer's transfer window.

Griezmann has a contract with Atletico until June 2023, but will see his current £200m release clause drop to £129m on July 1.
